

We are here today to present a solution to something that has been plaguing city dwellers for many years.

Yes that's right we are talking about the terrible numbers of pot plants and herb gardens that are killed off every year due to ignorance or poor time management.

No more.

gardenMates is here to help.

gardenMates comprises of an extensive cloud hosted library of plants and care instructions, a specially designed sensor to place in your pot plant or herb garden and a mobile phone app.

With the simple purchase of a gardenMates sensor and the free mobile phone app you'll soon have flowers galore and enough fresh herbs to feed the entire family.

The gardenMates Library has been sourced from plant databases around the world and includes information on growing tips and suitability to a particular area.

The specially designed sensor measures soil moisture levels, the Ph of the soil, the air temperature and ambient light.

The mobile phone app, available free from the Google Play Store or Apple Store shows the sensor data as meaningful graphics and syncs the sensor and plant data to your own space on the library server.

Our newly developed Artificial Intelligence "Artie" which resides on our secure cloud server will alert you via a notification to your phone if your plant needs water.

"Artie" won't choke either when it comes to suggesting a fertiliser treatment or alerting you that your plant may do better in a sunnier or more shaded location.

Pair your gardenMates sensor with the gardenMates app on your phone, choose the type of plant you want to monitor from the extensive library list and gardenMates will guide you to better plant health.

Your app will provide details on the best types of soil for your plant, how much water and sunlight it will need and other growing tips.

If you want to keep track of more than one pot plant or have several rows of herbs in your herb garden, you can purchase more gardenMates sensors. gardenMates will let you pair up to ten sensors to your phone or mobile device.

Coming soon with the gardenMates PRO subscription will be the ability to take a photograph of your plant if it's looking a little sickly or has been attacked by pests and share it with Artie for suggested course of action.

Just like having your very own Botanist on standby.

gardenMates will be available this winter at all good plant nurseries and Bunnings.
